

This excellent Pear usually ripens in November, and may be preserved a month or more: it is not subject to become mealy, and generally decays first externally. A variety called by some ingenious cultivators the Little Crasanne, which ripens later, and is superior to the one now described, the Author hopes to be enabled to treat fully of in a subsequent Number.